GSM is the owner of the design of JBIMC, but not the originators, producers, writers, owners or creative force behind the videos contained in the Video Bank. We provide a comprehensive linkfarm of material related to finding and knowing God built upon the hard work of the various producers. We encourage you to visit the home of the creators, visit them often and subscribe to as many as you can, as we seek not only to provide resources through JBIMC, but to point people to quality resources from the original owners and producers..JesusBelongsInMyCity.com is not selling you any of the content, be it radio, video, articles, links or any other digital information produced by third party or other sources. We simply manage them in one place to make your outreach, distribution, and awareness of resources effective through providing links and streams.

The information contained on Jesusbelongsinmycity.com (the "Service") is for general and education information purposes only.

Good Stuff Media assumes no responsibility for errors or omissions in the contents on the Service or the resources provided within..

In no event shall Good Stuff Media be liable for any special, direct, indirect, consequential, or incidental damages or any damages whatsoever, whether in an action of contract, negligence or other tort, arising out of or in connection with the use of the Service or the contents of the Service. Good Stuff Media reserves the right to make additions, deletions, or modification to the contents on the Service at any time without prior notice.

IS IT LEGAL TO LINK TO YOUTUBE VIDEOS?

As with most legal questions, it depends. Hyperlinking (a regular link) to a YouTube video is not infringing on any copyright laws because the video does not appear on your site. Only the link. Similarly, you can post links to any web page without asking permission from the owners. If a video is uploaded and the link to it is provided, it is assumed that the owner of the video wants you to link to it.
